Palms, white roses and chrysanthemums filled the church and formed an effective setting for the wedding party. Mr. Taylor, organist of the church, arranged an elaborate program, which was played before and during the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white organdie over white satin, and a large white hat, wreathed with gardenias. She carried a shower of valley lilacs. Miss Ruth Todd was the maid of honor, and wore a dainty gown of white organdie over pink satin, a large white hat, trimmed with pink roses, and carried a cluster of Bridesmaid roses.

DAUGHTERS HEAR
REPORT ON HOME

Interesting Discussion Before
Annual Convention
U. D. C.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Suffolk, Va., Oct. 13.—The principal discussion at to-day's session of the Daughters of the Confederacy was with reference to the Home for Needy Confederate Women, at Richmond. Among the leaders in the debates, which were warm, were Mrs. Montague, wife of Virginia's former Governor, Mrs. Walker, of Norfolk; Mrs. Randolph and others. Finally a resolution offered by Mrs. Randolph was adopted, but, according to the secretary, Mrs. Black, the relation of the convention towards the home remains exactly the same as was defined at Lexington and Manassas.

The convention was given a big oyster roast this afternoon at Lake Savage.

Earnest Discussions.
The sessions, morning and afternoon, were characterized by an earnestness in discussion that rendered them extremely interesting. Mrs. Nathan D. Eiler, of Lynchburg, was in the chair and made a splendid presiding officer.

Chapter reports, with which the morning session began, were laid aside on motion of Mrs. James Scott, of Lynchburg, in order that the main business of the day, the report of the committee regarding the Home for Needy Confederate Women, at Richmond, might come up. Mrs. Norman V. Randolph, chairman of the committee, made the following preliminary statement and report:

Report by Mrs. Randolph.
"Mrs. Andrew Jackson Montague, acting president of the Home for Needy Confederate Women, in Richmond, having appeared before a previous convention at Lexington and proposed to turn over the home to the care of the Virginia Division, the following committee was appointed by Mrs. Eiler: Mrs. V. Randolph, Mrs. James Scott and Mrs. A. A. Campbell, to meet a committee appointed by Mrs. Montague for a full discussion and understanding. The committee met in Richmond on April 15, Mrs. Campbell not being present."

"The first question asked was if her board was willing to adopt Mrs. Montague's proposition. The answer was that the proposition was unanimously refused, and a letter from Miss Mary Lee, president of the board, confirmed the refusal.

"The meeting was pleasant, but nothing definite was proposed, the ladies on the board of the home only asking for the co-operation of the Virginia division. As chairman, I requested that Mrs. Montague send us an official letter to present to the convention."

"Mrs. Montague offered the division a representation of three members on the board. Feeling assured that the committee would not accept such a proposition, I recommended that the representation be increased to six, and requested that the charter and by-laws be sent us. Both of these requests were granted. After the most careful consideration I, finding that the home was for a perpetual memorial, submitted the following questions to the committee:

"1. Does the home meet the needs of Virginia women? It does not; there is no hospital where the sick and paralyzed may come."
"2. Is it possible for the Virginia division to maintain another home? Impossible, unless under State rule."
"3. Is the home only for Confederate women, according to charter, or an endowed institution according to by-laws?"

"4. Shall the Virginia division have a fund to place these women in other homes? Or, instead of paying an annual board of $125, apply as suggested above, to the State for an appropriation to establish and maintain a State institution? Is not that the duty of the State?"

"These questions were taken up, one by one, and the committee now submits the following:

Committee's Recommendations.
"After an examination of the charter and by-laws we feel that an endowed institution, a perpetual existence is a responsibility which the division cannot recommend to the division for their official support."

"That the official communication from the home is too indefinite for action to be taken on it by the division."

"That while the establishment of this home reflects the greatest credit upon the women whose names appear in its charter and upon those who have since carried to such perfection this beautiful home, that this home does not meet the needs of the division, and that the division must seek from the State provision for the old and paralyzed and infirm women who must find immediate relief."

"Until that time the committee recommends that the chapters who have so generously contributed to the home will continue their work. They have placed old ladies in the home and should feel obligated for their support, until some other provision is made."

"In conclusion, the committee thanks Mrs. Montague and her board for the courtesy extended its members who wish the management of the home the success it deserves."

Mrs. Montague Makes Address.
Following Mrs. Randolph, Mrs. Montague said to the convention:

"The slogan of our work has ever been a home to shelter and protect, in age and poverty; our women of the 60's, a period which is said to have produced the highest type of Southern womanhood. It is to this end that I am granted by this convention an opportunity of appearing in person before it, and of making my earnest entreaty that in as much as your work of monument building is well now completed, you will join hearts and hands with us in our work."

"The Confederate Home in Richmond is in its tenth year; we have overcome great and trying obstacles, and we now wish to make of it a true monument that our children and their descendants for all time may look upon it and say that we have builded well."

"We would be greatly rejoiced to have actual representation from your body on our board, as the beginning of a new movement for full co-operation and practically ultimate ownership by the Daughters of the Confederacy of this State."

"I cannot give serious thought to the many rumors which have reached our board for the past year to the effect that this body desires to establish another home, or, upon failure to do so, to solicit aid from the State in that behalf. I seriously ask, What use have we for another home when the one in existence not only represents property and years of sacrifice and success, but a home which has for its object the very same things which any home you might establish will have? A slight consideration will convince you that such a project would hinder rather than further the cause common to our hearts. Why buy what you can practically obtain by gift? And our property is not without considerable value. It is free from debt, in thorough repair, well furnished and well located, and is conservatively estimated to be of a value of about $55,000. Our buildings and grounds admit of larger additions at a relatively small cost. We now support twenty-eight inmates, and have three paid domestics. This achievement has come by the labors of a few, aided by some of the chapters of our State. But consider what are our possibilities should we have the wise and zealous co-operation of the chapters of the Virginia State division."

"Why should not the Daughters help us what we now have, rather than undertake to destroy by competition a work which has served, and is serving, so noble a need? I venture to suggest that the State will not support this home, and that such a plan is visionary and impractical. Under our new Constitution the State will not appropriate money unless it becomes full owner. Ownership and control by the State would be most unfortunate. It would mean at once an administration based upon the wholesale political considerations to the disregard of efficiency of administration or the needs of humanity. Moreover, such ownership would take from our hands and hearts a duty which is solely ours, and by the doing of which we fulfill the claims of a most precious heritage, thereby developing our character and spirit. This work should not be done by proxy. It is ours, and only ours to do."

"Again, State ownership and control would mean an institution with only a few years of life, while our idea is that this home should be a perpetual memorial to the women whose sufferings have not been inferior to those of our soldiers; and, to my mind this home should be a perpetual monument to their sacrifices and heroism, the continued maintenance of which in all time to come will best respond to the wishes of every Confederate soldier for such a living monument would afford at once an opportunity of developing our highest natures, and would be giving the bread of life to an unending line of Confederate descendants."

"Therefore, let us set ourselves to the establishment of a permanent home, which will be a living monument of joy to the needy and of honor to ourselves, in that we have honored those that deserve to be honored."

Animated Discussion.

An animated discussion immediately ensued. Mrs. Montague stated that she was present to answer any and all questions that might be asked, and to give an account to any one desiring it, of how all money contributed to the support of the home had been spent or invested. She said that in five years the home had received $53,523.85; that the home had twenty-eight inmates, three domestics and a matron, and that the yearly cost of running it was about $4,500.

In reply to a question as to whether board representation was in proportion to support expected, and if so, what amount would be right for the Virginia division to contribute, with six board members, Mrs. Montague replied that she was not prepared, on the spur of the moment to go into details.

Then the argument for and against the endowment fund of the home began again, the irreconcilable point of difference being that Mrs. Montague desired the endowment to go on and the Virginia division was unable to work for an endowment, instead of applying money to the present urgent needs of old and feeble Confederate women.

Mrs. Scott, of Lynchburg, asked Mrs. Montague, if the present movement were allowed to remain intact and the Virginia division pledged itself to give a fixed sum for a certain number of years to support the home, the board would agree?

Mrs. Montague could not decide without a quorum of her board. She intended telegraphing two board members earlier in the day to come to Suffolk and thus form a quorum, but she had relinquished the idea.

Just here the convention adjourned for luncheon.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Montague and the members of her board presented

Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Clowers, Mrs. David Brown and Mrs. J. P. White, held a conference outside of the hall.

Mrs. J. Enders Robinson, historian of the division, and of the general United Daughters of the Confederacy body, in order to bring matters to a conclusion, moved: "That the report of the committee on co-operation with the Home for Needy Confederate Women of Richmond, Va., shall be put on file in the record of the Virginia division for future reference, as no definite action has been taken."

Withdraws Proposition.

Mrs. Montague and her committee having by this time returned, Mrs. Montague, in a few words, withdrew the proposition made by her to the division, and asked that the chapters individually continue their help as heretofore.

The division gave a rising vote of thanks to its committee for two years' work in regard to the co-operation plan. Thanks were also extended to the retiring treasurer, Mrs. C. B. Tate, for her most efficient service.

The officers and members of the division are invited to take luncheon with Mrs. Montague and the board of the Needy Confederate Women's Home, in Richmond, to-morrow.
